2016-08/2  QUESTION/DISCUSSION PERIOD

2016-08/2a  MNIF Policy changes

DEJONG
MNIF Policy changes document is in Google Drive.

MONDA
I have a question and some comments under facts specified in point 10. Also, concerning academic price index (API), is change new as the university started it this year?

GHOSSEIN
It started last year.

MONDA
It is still new and could this be questionable? Also, since this is an index that the university has made, should it still be called the academic price index?

GHOSSEIN
We have to say if it is not contradictory to any political policy. Also, since we haven't mentioned it in any other policy like inflation, they should mention consistency as a value.

BROPHY
Add that they should make a resolution that the university is using API and not CPI.

LARSEN
Said that he understands it but he doesn't know where it is coming from.
GHOSSEIN
Mentioned that it is the board that approves it.

LARSEN
Questioned, where is API?

GHOSSEIN
Acknowledged that it is a good question, and said that they are presented it to the board and the board presented it but nothing is documented and so you can't find anything.

LARSEN
Are we are to make sure where all the information is coming from?

GHOSSEIN
The present provost and VP Finance are responsible.

LARSEN
To have a citation, they need a source on where the information is coming from.

MONDA
Clarified about the API and mentioned that he sees that the university has useful measures. CPI is a reasonably easy to understand in the university context; a breakdown how API cost are calculated and explained to students and collective arguments should be in a firm that are understandable by students;

GHOSSEIN
Questioned how would he frame that in terms of transparency, as transparency is a value that is needed.

MONDA
Said that in addition to transparency, they will have consistency.

LARSEN
Said that he wants to differentiate this point in general, and questioned if they are going to differentiate API as a standard for inflation? Said that he is on the CPI side but wants to know where API is coming from.

BROPHY
Questioned, why it should be a separate policy? Said that he is okay with rolling it into the MNIF policy.
(Delaine Howie joins the meeting)

DEJONG
Said that they will bring it to council. Points 1 and 3 are being added, is everyone comfortable with adding those?

MONDA
Said that he can compare and contrast all the policies but is not sure where to find information about the same, and still doesn’t see where the last meeting’s outcome are addressed;

DEJONG
Asked if others also share that concern.

(All agree)

LARSEN
There are notable differences between SU fees and your standard MNIF. These aren't just opinion, they can be cited in policy, such as our internal policy or the University’s definition of MNIF’s. Point 7 & 9 are examples of such.

MONDA
Mentioned that his question is would that be a better resolution, and that he thinks that point 7 makes sense but the difference between them in legislation should be there.

GHOSSEIN
Asked if point 7 would be enough with added words?

DEJONG
Agreed

BANISTER
Mentioned that they can get sources for these points.

MONDA
Mentioned that he thinks that Policy Committee is overstaying in this policy, while there are other things one needs to do before the year ends.

BANISTER
Said that they do not need to define every single statement.

BROPHY
A few citations are a good thing but it is not a good idea to be excessively obsessed.

DEJONG
Asked if all approved of point 3.

All committee members approved.

DEJONG
Said that in point 5, they are adding university or student associations which includes SU, university and any other university associations.

All agreed.

MONDA
It is important to mention the university has control over their own fees.

GHOSSEIN
How about saying that the university and SU have a their own process for changing the fees and not jointly. Can combine points 7 and 9 in the manner.

BANISTER
Said that she prefers to put the word "different."
Said that she thinks that it is more of a risk and that there is no harm by removing it.

DEJONG
Asked if all committee members approved of point 8.

MONDA
Indicated that commas are not needed.

(All agreed)

(Mike Sandare comes)

DEJONG
Said that they went over the first principles and asked how committee members felt about bringing the policy to council.

All members agreed in bringing the policy to council.

DEJONG
After we know the Students’ Council’s decision, we will look into it at our next Policy committee meeting.

SANDARE
Asked the meaning of “different process fess.”

DEJONG
Explained that they are different by means of citations and can highlight the process or the fees.

SANDARE
Asked the difference between mandatory and instructional fees are same -how are they different;

LARSEN
Clarified that they are trying to explain that;

GHOSSSEIN
Said that it is not the type but the process;

DEJONG
Asked what about point 7, which is the process to change the fee and if it is different for the university and SU;

LARSEN
Agreed;

(All agreed)

DEJONG
Asked if any committee members would like to edit point 7.

Members had no changes they’d like to make.

DEJONG
Asked for if anyone had any other comments on any of the sections?

MONDA
Discussed about current and old MNIF policies and said how it is hard to get feedback on them. It would be a good idea if somebody could further look into getting feedback on the MNIF policies.

(Brandon Christensen come in,)

DEJONG moves to renew the Student Space Political Policy as is.

HOWIE
Said that the more she reads it the more she does not understand it, and she will contact all of the committee members for help.

DEJONG
The policy is expiring in 2017, and it is a short policy. Asked if all of the members had a chance to look at the policy. Last year Jared renewed it, and asked if there is any discussion on this policy.

LARSEN
Asked if they want to say that space must be more available like gender specific, etc.

DEJONG
Said that if there is no debate, she will recommend the policy to Council for renewal.

6. University of Alberta students enrolled in spring and summer classes spend a significant amount of time commuting to and from campus.
7. University of Alberta students enrolled in spring and summer classes should be able to obtain a spring and/or summer U-Pass regardless of the student’s full-time or part-time enrollment status.

When seated in the back of the bus, I had a man in the sideways seats leaning into my personal space. He began trying to speak to me despite me having headphones in. I still don’t know what he was trying to ask me. He mumbled so I had to politely ask him several times to repeat himself and he got irate, and then picked a fight with another male passenger seated across from him. I had to leave the bus. Some way to alert the driver to a disturbance, more measures in the back of the bus. I have found it difficult to alert drivers or feel I can get out safely when seated in the back of the bus.

Most of the issues I’ve encountered have been due to patrons that are unstable or inebriated. Short of a chilling and unpleasant constant law enforcement presence, or unfair discrimination of access, there’s not much that can be done. Another B.O.B. campaign on harassment of female passengers in particular would be appreciated as it is usually an education issue. Drivers have access to police on busses. Trains are monitored by video surveillance.

5/25/2015 13:44: No Yes When a bus driver told me I looked like Miley Cyrus and asked me to twerk for him. Yes Female/Other

5/25/2015 17:00: Yes Yes - I have been harassed on transit without intervention. - When I have to wait for a long time at Clareview LRT station without reliable security nearby. More busses on high traffic routes. I travel from o’barry to MacEwan daily and the busses are so full that there is not even standing room and people are often turned away. The route we take passes 3 high schools, 2 junior high, 3 elementary, 2 post secondary and many child care locations. I stopped using public transport in October, even though it was included in my tuition fees because there was never enough personal space. I was pregnant through the entire semester and was unable to get seating to have a safe ride. Secondly because of the one year delay in opening the MacEwan LRT it was a 4 block walk on icy sidewalks with 30lbs of textbooks required for my program. I felt unsafe in this and had no choice but to pay for parking closer to the campus. F

5/25/2015 18:00: Yes Yes Waiting at the downtown LRT stations after dark are always the worst times. There is very limited security down there in the way of cameras or alarms, and I have been stuck multiple times waiting for the train with a guy harassing me and no one else around. Emergency call boxes as well as operator alert signals on the LRT sometimes

5/19/2015 17:14: Yes Yes - 2 E-cigarette smokers on ETS bus who were in the company of a ~4 year old and did not seem concerned with their language choices near her. - Two lovers sharing a bottle of vodka on an ETS bus at 2 in the afternoon - Pan handlers frequenting my common LRT stops (eg Bay, Stadium) - Lack of police presence and monitoring in underground pedways (eg MIlkenian/ Belgravia LRT) and stations with limited exits (eg, U of A) More frequent peace officer presence Fines/ penalties for panhandling in an ETS/LRT station Prioritizing video monitoring and review when complaints of abuse or harassment are reported

5/19/2015 17:34: Yes Yes I have experience a number of unsafe experience on Edmonton Transit that mostly concerns verbal and sexual harassment. I have had experiences standing on the bus when a man beside has tried to look up my skirt. I’ve experienced numerous encounters of cat-calling and harassment that often ends up being sexual in nature. I encountered this one time specifically in the LRT system when I was in a car with 4 or 5 people. There was a man who started harassing me and instigating that he would like to have sex. This made me uncomfortable and I felt unsafe. I was reluctant to get off at my spot as the underground LRT stops have little to know people in the evenings.

While I understand the increased automation of systems and ticket checks to be more time and cost efficient I found that I felt safer taking transit when I interacted with the drivers, ticket checkers, or security officers. Calling 911 pressing the red buttons in LRT cars

5/19/2015 17:53: Yes Yes More frequent peace officer presence Fines/ penalties for panhandling in an ETS/LRT station Prioritizing video monitoring and review when complaints of abuse or harassment are reported

5/19/2015 22:34: Yes Yes A fight broke out on the colesseum LRT platform. When a bus driver told me I looked like Miley Cyrus and asked me to twerk for him. Yes Agender

5/25/2015 14:37: Yes Yes More recently I was verbally assualted and harassed by two teenaged girls at the Kingsway transit centre (side note I was 8 months pregnant at the time. I asked them to move away from the bus stop while smoking. They refused, verbally assualted me and proceeded to blow smoke in my face telling me I was a terrible mother. They followed me onto the bus and continued their verbal assualt April 20 2015 approx 2:30 pm

5/25/2015 12:47: Yes Yes I’ve seen three fights break out on buses over the course of 7 years taking transit regularly as a student. Far more common are concerns from female friends about harassment they have faced that are passed on to me. Yes Male

5/25/2015 17:09: Yes Yes - I have been harassed on transit without intervention. - When I have to wait for a long time at Clareview LRT station without reliable security nearby. Ask your bus drivers not to drive away on someone who is visibly approaching to connect from other lines (trains, buses). That as a younger female it feels very unsafe and unnecessary. Yes F

Nothing specific, just particularly when in the underground sections of the LRT as it can be very quiet and as a woman I feel vulnerable. It feels too risky, therefore I use LRT only when absolutely necessary.

Better security (more patrollers, emergency access) and monitors everywhere, especially in the underground sections. In addition, making it very obvious cameras are everywhere.

There are many areas in LRT (university station) where there is no security camera. Also, the internet connection is poor especially where there are stairs since it's in the basement area. I think I would feel safer to have the camera available and have better internet or phone connection.

The other day, I was waiting at Churchill station at around 10 am, and there was a guy with a duffle bag pacing around and swearing to himself and checking his watch. He didn’t get on the train going to Clareview when it came, and he didn’t get on the century park train either. I noticed that as I was getting on the train, he was staring me down and headed to the phone booth to make a call. This is just one of many times I am pretty sure I’ve witnessed someone waiting for a drug deal.

More security guards at the LRT stations (particularly the downtown stations).

Several times I have had men (varying in age, some were intoxicated) make lewd comments towards me. This has always happened on the LRT. I have never had an encounter while taking the bus.

Lights at each bus stop might be a good idea... or even an emergency button at stops like West Ed, Lewis Farms, Jasper Place, etc. I'm not sure if those already exist. I am not aware that there is a button to press to speak to the driver at one end of the bus but if I'm not close to it then my only hope is that someone else will use it if I'm being victimized.

When riding the LRT I know there are emergency buttons to push or that will contact security. Not the same for the riding the bus.

Security boxes in transit centers, cameras in underground LRT stations, and on-foot patrol officers (although I’ve rarely ever see them at WEM, only sometimes at underground LRT stations, and never at above-ground LRT stations).

The majority of the time that I feel unsafe when using Edmonton Transit is concerning the safety around transit centers. On the bus/LRT I actually feel fairly safe, I would feel much safer at transit centers if there were patrol officers dedicated to each center (calling for a patrol who takes 15 minutes to arrive doesn’t help me).

Security boxes (blue light/button) are few and far between. Can there be a number I can text a concern to without drawing attention to myself? E.g. If my bus driver is driving way too fast and jumping multiple curbs (happened once), if the man sitting on the other side of the terminal is threatening me; if I saw a kid getting bullied but know that I will get hurt too if I intervene, etc. Also, the number would have to be logical, so that I can remember it in a stressful situation. E.g. 780-ETS-HELP (780-387-4357).

When two guys got into an altercation because of where one of the individuals was sitting. The guy that instigated the conflict was intoxicated.

When I tell him I do not continue an uncomfortable conversation comments about my looks or try and make demeaning comments about me keep talking to my sister like that... btw, I don’t have a sister and I was just looking at my cell phone to check the time) while I was on the train sometime in the afternoon. This happened once but I guess what made me scary the most was that no one on the train even looked at the guy or me when this was happening. People really didn’t care.

The patroller who takes 15 minutes to arrive dedicated to each center (calling for a security box) to make a call. This is just one of many times I am pretty sure I’ve witnessed someone waiting for a drug deal. The guy that instigated the conflict was intoxicated.

More security at busy times, my sister just about got her purse stolen and it was the police/security presence- not just during major events or when they are down for events.

I have seen patrol officers take the train, although this is rare.

Better security (more patrollers, emergency access) and monitors everywhere, especially in the underground sections. In addition, making it very obvious cameras are everywhere.

Some train stations have phone booths, so I could call 911 if needed. Trains have emergency alarm buttons to push in case of emergency. I don’t know of any security measures on buses.

I am aware that there is a button to press to speak to the driver at one end of the bus but if I’m not close to it then my only hope is that someone else will use it if I’m being victimized.

At some train stations have security around above-ground stations. It’s in the basement area. I think I would feel safer to have the camera available and have better internet or phone connection.

Times I feel unsafe usually include some kind of intoxicated male or groups of rowdy (sometimes intoxicated) teens. Once there was a group of young males and they had themselves sprawled out all over the entire back part of the bus. There were available seats back there but I felt like you were putting yourself in the middle of a fist fight if you went back there. I know the BOOI campaign tried this, but I feel like there is a whole group of people out there who don’t know how to behave in public. It would be nice if it felt like drivers were paying attention to what’s happening in the back of the bus. Then maybe they could quietly call a transit security person who could then just board the bus for a bit. That would take the pressure off the driver to be the intervening party. The security officer is better equipped to handle boiling people off the bus if required and maybe just by being there for a bit, letting these people know that they aren’t unnoticed, would help release some of the tension.</td>

I once watched a guy get stabbed and did first aid on him because the bus driver told me and my friends his shift was over and to get off his bus. We asked him before we got on the bus if we was going to our stop and he said yes but we never made it to our stop because he told us to get off before we made it there.

These are all on different occasions:

- Once on the #1 a drunk man kept trying to touch a teenaged girl inappropriately, so I told him to stop, and he tried to punch me. Another passenger (a large guy) intervened, and the drunk man backed off.
- Once on the #2 a man kept pulling off my headphones to get me to talk to him. I politely and firmly told him I wanted to listen to my headphones and wasn't interested in talking. He yelled and tried to yank my headphones away. I moved to another seat, and he followed. I got off at the next stop and awaited a second bus.
- Once on the LRT a man pulled on my hair very hard. I asked him what he was doing, and he said that he was trying to get my attention. I moved to a different part of the car, and he followed, and yelled at me for ignoring him.
- Once on the #1 a bus driver was making lewd comments about my appearance. I didn't know how to respond, and as I didn't want to get kicked off the bus at night.
- Once on the LRT a passenger was playing with a large knife and making stabbing motions with it. I got off the train and caught the next one.
- Many times on buses, the driver would weave in and out of traffic, and go through red lights when it wasn't safe.

Multiple times where I have been approached with aggression, mostly verbal, all from men, and usually in a sexual manner. The worst, was once on the bus I heard a man crying so I turned around to see where it was coming from and he started screaming at me, calling me a whore, and telling me that he sucks dicks all night... the bus driver said nothing, and neither did anyone else, so I got off the bus on the next stop and he started shouting that he was going to kill me... again no help from anyone. That was the last time I ever stepped foot on an Edmonton bus.

Also, taking the LRT and walking home, I have had multiple men follow me home trying to get my attention. A man literally went as far as to follow me in a white panel van and kept telling me to get in. I once watched a guy get stabbed and did first aid on him because the bus driver told me and my friends his shift was over and to get off his bus. We asked him before we got on the bus if we was going to our stop and he said yes but we never made it to our stop because he told us to get off before we made it there.

I was riding home from night class and there was a clearly very drunk older man that would not stop talking to me and rode with the almost to my stop. I thought about pretending that the only other person on the bus (a 20-something guy) was a friend just to be able to distance myself from the older guy. The man ended up getting off a few stops before me. I jogged from my stop home just to be safe.

If there was a transit officer stationed at terminals after it got dark I would feel way more comfortable riding back from my night classes. Yes Female

When people get on the LRT in a group shouting and swearing. Or when people come sit with you and stare at you and won't leave you alone. Have more of a visible peace officer presence. Have turnstiles so that people are not just hoping on the train without a ticket. Yes Female

I have been harassed while riding the LRT/bus many times. I never ride past 9:00pm and only ever around the Corona station and University station (two generally "safe" areas). Once, this winter, a man started screaming at me in the LRT, calling me sexually abusive names. Luckily, a fellow student came over and offered assistance. The man backed off. It was very scary. I see drug deals occur around the Corona station every week. Pot is often openly smoked. I often see people carry large knives or razors onto a bus or train. If a cop is around, they simply put the weapon under their coat. I keep my head down when I ride transit.

MORE POLICE PLEASE! I would love to see more security in and around the transit system. Cracking down on the drug deals that occur DAILY at all the major LRT and bus stations would be so so helpful. Yes Female

At night time, taking the LRT through downtown, or waiting for transit after dark at transit stations. There are often intoxicated people at transit stations after dark, and it's unnerving to be waiting for transit and feeling alone with someone who could potentially cause me harm as they are not in the right state of mind.

There's not much you can do about these people, I know that. But when it feels unsafe. Not really but can I just complain about the 7 route for just a second? I think it's a very important bus route as it goes to two universities, downtown and through Whyte Ave and yet it rarely runs and I found it is always early. I dunno what's up with that. I think it should be considered more of a major route like the 8 or 9 and run more often. A lot of people I've talked to agree with this. It's awesome that you guys are doing this survey about safety but from everyone I talk to, it's more important to see what people want to say about ETS in general. The ETS App is a great start. Also maybe could there be some sort of low income service when buying a bus pass? I got a deal through the school year but when it's summer I have to pay the normal fee and I am still only making $12 an hour plus I have rent and bills to pay. Just an idea. Thank you for reading.

So the last train tends to be back with students on Thursdays heading back from bars on Jasper, but one fine evening I somehow got separated from my group. I did not have enough money to cab it back so I decided to take the train back to the stop near lecturer center. While waiting for the train I was approached by a group of men who cat called (in a putting it lightly) me. Then after a few minutes they left and from the area above the train platform they threw the entire contents of the metro papers at me. Then after a few minutes they left and from the area above the train platform they threw the entire contents of the metro papers at me.

There have been particular instances where individuals riding the bus are threatening for an unknown reason. Once, I walked onto the bus, minding my own business when a girl shouted "ohh!!" At me. I hadn't done anything. From there she continued to reach out and touch my boyfriend, who's back was turned to her, and she wouldn't stop until we found a new spot on to stand the bus (it was packed and all we could do was shimmied in closer). She was very unhappy when we left, glaring through the window. I felt bad because perhaps she had a mental illness, but I wish I could have talked to the driver or had some back-up to feel safer on the ride.

Two drunk guys got on and looked like they just got out of a fight and I was on the bus alone.

There were a few times where men approached me and I was afraid they could become violent. There were a lot of people around me so I know I would have help if I needed it but I still was on edge. I would especially feel unsafe at Jasper Place bus stop, where there were a lot of people who were obviously under the influence of drugs and alcohol would gather.

I have had a lot of experiences, especially at night, where there were men who were obviously under the influences of narcotics. During their high they would trip out and scream profanities, pace around and have general erratic behaviour.

Someone was drunk and vomited next to me 7 times in the course of two stops at 11am. Another time, a bunch of teenager boys were drinking beer in the back of the bus and referring to young women they knew as sluts and bitches. Nobody said anything. Anytime it’s late and I’m taking the bus alone with drunk men, I tend to feel intimidated. Once a man on my bus started yelling at a young girl in a hijab and calling her a terrorist. No one intervened and she fled the bus.

Random police or security presence on buses. I appreciate the cameras but the reality is that bus drivers are too busy driving to do much about passengers.

-Drunk people on the bus -man with blood came on the bus so he could go to the hospital and the bus driver allowed this -a man yelling he was going to murder/beat people on the bus and rape a girl Bus driver did nothing -several drunk groups of people

Do not let drunk/high, and sort of intoxicated people on.

I feel uncomfortable at night times particularly. When “sketchy” people get on the bus/train station I get concerned. Especially both LRT scenarios because I feel like there is no escape or help if it was just me at the station or train because the driver can’t see me.

I think if you had peace officers or security at some of the underground stations where there’s no where to escape easily if there was a problem.

Really really drunk loud people. Even though there’s alarms everywhere, the fact that there’s likely not a person on immediate call to help on a train at any given time is scary with really aggressive individuals. Maybe have more officers at stations themselves? It’s kind of the security is out of sight/mind sort of this for those types of people?

A very drunk man was sitting beside me and kept leaning on me to fall asleep, and invading my personal space. Proactive measures to take disrespectful individuals off the bus (i.e. individuals who are making others feel unsafe)

A man who’s actions could be explained by him being extremely intoxicated, but I don’t actually know what his condition was. Making a lot of noise, being antisocial and seeming unpredictable.

I identify as a woman

It was at 10PM on a Thursday in April heading down from Clareview to University. Drunken and disheveled people were running about the train car with their children and one obnoxious man had a visible knife in his pocket.

Dealing with the public drunkenness and having a larger police presence on the line.

Once, a drunk man was yelling very loudly on the train and it was very worrisome because there were children also on the train.

Another time, a deranged man who was clearly intoxicated with something (alcohol or drugs) kept making derogatory remarks to every passenger near him and even threatening certain passengers with violent and graphic insults.

On a bus, one delusional man eavesdropped on my phone call and when I was finished, he repeated my conversation to me without the proper context, framing it to sound that I was some criminal. He proceeded to threaten to put me in jail somehow. I ended up ignoring him.

Having safety buttons on the bus would help especially at the back of the bus.

This drunk native guy got on the bus, and then some black guy on the phone was looking at him briefly and the drunk man thought he was talking to the cops, came up right in his face saying who are you talking to and kept asking, looked like he was going to attack him, and then he goes stumbling to the front of the bus, almost everyone in the bus was terrified. I wasn’t, but majority were, and it was a very uncomfortable bus ride. He got off after a few stops, and the atmosphere of the people are the bus was huge relief.

Some how, without discrimination, not allowing potentially dangerous people on the bus. You can get a nice feeling with some people.

I’m not really sure I know of any. I know I sometimes see peace officers looking for tickets but that’s it. Cameras, Monitoring, Alarms on all windows/doors.

People are the bus was like a huge relief. Uncomfortable bus ride. He got off after everyone in the bus was terrified. I wasn’t, stumbling to the front of the bus, almost was going to attack him, and then he goes up right in his face saying who are you thought he was talking to the cops, came back looking at him briefly and the drunk man thought he was talking to the cops, came up right in his face saying who are you talking to and kept asking, looked like he was going to attack him, and then he goes stumbling to the front of the bus, almost everyone in the bus was terrified. I wasn’t, but majority were, and it was a very uncomfortable bus ride. He got off after a few stops, and the atmosphere of the people are the bus was huge relief.
Being gay, there are times when taking the bus or the train when I worry about the idea of being randomly attacked and not being able to defend myself. This is most common during the evening when I'm coming home from work.

One time in particular, I was taking the train from Southgate to Central station and this drunk man kept on muttering homophobic comments under his breath when I sat across from him. I eventually ended up moving seats, but I still got looks from him for the remainder of the trip.

This would be a wonderful addition for Edmonton, since most of the time in unsafe situations on transit it could be dangerous to make a phone call.

Increased transit police. It is rare to see

Focus less on looking for passengers proof of purchase and instead passenger well being.

It was disheartening to see the advertising done about the transit police that communicated that they were checking for proof of purchase in efforts to "help the community." Poor communications in my opinion as it should be their main priority to keep us safe and not the organization profitable.

Drivers should prevent drunk individuals from using public transit if they are acting aggressive or rude. Drivers should also be more aware of uncomfortable situations happening on the bus. Transit police, peace officers, and EPS should have a stronger presence at LRT stations and on bus routes where problems are abundant.

I was riding late on the LRT and someone suspicious (to me) got on at Stadium station. Nothing happened, but I still felt jitters.

I also find that there are some interesting people lurking around the bus loop at WEM. I've had people come up to me and start talking to me about their story even with standard social cues (hmm, not paying attention, showing disinterest).

He was hissing at other passengers, as well as going right up into other people's faces. It was definitely abnormal behaviour that was not dealt with as soon as it should. It went on for more than 30 minutes where the bus driver didn't seem to care when it was brought to his attention. Although there is an emergency line on LRT's, it would be nice if there were increased security and safety measures on buses. As there are instances where passengers can put other passengers at risk. 5/26/2015 10:30: Yes Yes Many countless times. A recent moment was on a crowded morning LRT when I sat across from a man, and his legs sprawled out towards me so that his crotch pointed towards me. I noticed him staring at me. I stared back. He continued to give me a long dead stare. I held out my hands like "what?". He continued to stare into my eyes. Everyone could see what was happening and no one cared. I felt unsafe so I got up and moved to the other side of the compartment. Training for bus drivers in the case of a situation where a passenger may endanger other riders. Having on-site and visible security at LRT stations after 9pm.

5/26/2015 12:23: Yes Yes In the back of the bus when drunk or rude guys talk to you or other women on the bus. More officers.

5/26/2015 18:22: Yes Yes Several occasions where drunk individuals are on the train. I'm really not sure what measures can be taken to reduce this, as it is public transport. It's open for anyone to use, and it would be unrealistic to closely monitor everyone who steps onto the train. I think it's important that people are aware of the risks, though, and some education on how to deal with these instances wouldn't hurt.

5/26/2015 23:06: Yes Yes It is almost every single time I ride ETS or am waiting at a transit station - especially at peak hours (when there is a crowd), and later in the evening.

For one specific time, about a year and a half ago I was taking the #1 Downtown from West Edmonton Mall at around 10:00 PM after a shift at the store I worked at. The bus, as was typical, was extremely crowded with a large number of people standing. At Jasper Place terminal, quite a large number of people got on the bus, including an individual who was most likely intoxicated as he smelt of alcohol. He sat on the 3 person bench facing the back exit. When my stop came, I had to walk past him to get to the door, and he blocked my way with his legs and proceeded to grab my ass. I pushed him off and got off the bus as quickly as possible because it was not worth it to report (and also not safe or fair for the driver to have to deal with, or other passengers). This situation was also extra uncomfortable because I was 15 or 19 at the time, but could pass for 15 or 16. Have more Peace Officers present at transit stations, have transit security present at EVERY LRT station and on every train.

BOB was a great campaign to do, as is the superhero one for how to behave and not take up too much room, but we should have a campaign directly targeting how to not be perpetuating violence and what consequences are for people who disturb the safety of other passengers. If we want to increase ridership, we have to have it be safer so that drivers and passengers aren't just avoiding the unsafe person on the bus.

We also can't target a specific group (which I have seen done far too often) - it is not just, for example, Indigenous men and homeless individuals who are causing safety concerns.

5/27/2015 22:53: Yes Yes Talking to drivers, ETS investigators, Peace Officers, transit security, calling control
Every single time I have to wait an hour (because my bus comes so infrequently) by myself at WEM transit centre when I arrive there at 10 PM or later in the night. Even coming home from K-Days last year, I missed a bus from South Campus by 5 minutes, so I had to wait there half an hour (at night, alone), noting that my next bus had stopped running, so I called a taxi in advance (so it would be ready by the time I got to the mall). Once I got to WEM, I was the only person there. The one person I was really scared and on edge because I was alone, with no way of getting home in the dark. I was stuck, and I contemplated the hour walk it would take to get home. I was really frustrated and even had the thought, "so this is how I die." My taxi came 45 minutes after I got to the mall. I was furious with the planes, trains, and automobiles approach Edmonton's unreliable transit, but was glad I made it home after a few hours of tiring.

When I have an evening class, I dread taking the bus, especially because of the time between transfers. Some people don't know personal space boundaries or what defines as harassment.

Other times when I feel unsafe include when I'm standing at any bus stop downtown, when swearing, drunk people get on the bus. One time, in the back of the bus, it was just me and an angry, swearing man. He got off after a few stops, but I felt like I couldn't change seats—that it would be better if I just stayed there while he yelled.

Other issues (that don't pertain to my safety) include, swearing junior high kids, people that don't vacate the priority seats immediately, and people that don't have manners (i.e. thanking the driver).

In the evening on the LRT, there were a few guys who got on and were very loud and rude and were quite threatening. They started talking to another girl who really didn't want to be bothered and eventually buggered off. I was hoping they wouldn't come my way. Stadium station is really bad as well for people lingering while high or drunk. That's happened multiple times. One guy tried following me around the station until the train came and I got on a train car he was too far from to get on as well.

Please have more patrols around LRT stations and on the trains. It's waiting at the station for my bus late at night after classes that I am pretty scared by the people around, especially stadium station.

2016-09/2 QUESTION/DISCUSSION PERIOD

2016-09/2a Meeting Schedule

DEJONG: I like having meetings on off-council weeks as that gives us time to bring it to Council. The next Council meeting is Tuesday, February 28th after reading week. I would just propose that move our next meeting to be the next Tuesday following that so March 7th.

SANDARE: How many policies do we have left to go through that expire this term and how many weeks of council?

DEJONG: I believe we have four policies and we have four weeks of council.

BANISTER: There won’t be quorum if Policy meets on March 7th due to five members on leave of absence during elections.

BROPHY: I am also unable.

DEJONG: I really do want to have a meeting that week. We are going to call a meeting on Friday, March 10th.

BANISTER: Election party will be at 6PM.

LARSEN: Also, Council Meet and Greet will be that day from 12PM to 3PM.

DEJONG: Are people available at 11AM?

Councillors agree.

DEJONG: We will be calling a Policy Committee meeting from 11AM to 12PM on Friday March 10th, and are next meeting following that will be 4pm on March 21st.
DEJONG: This is one of the policies that expire this term. Does anyone have any comments they would like to make?

BROPHY: A problem one of my constituents ran into last summer while they were working at University was that they couldn’t get any sort of pass. As they were not taking classes, they couldn’t get a upass. And they couldn’t get any sort of transit passes like other employees do who aren’t students. It would be nice if there was something in there for employees who are also students to have access to transit passes.

DEJONG: That is reasonable.

MONDA: You can get a upass if you add a class, then drop it.

BROPHY: There generally aren’t summer classes for law students to do that plus I don’t think it’s fair for students to have to go through a work around like that.

MONDA: Yeah, I agree with that.

HOWIE: So, employees of the Students’ Union have access to getting a upass?

BROPHY: Students who are considered casual employees of the university even though they work full time during that summer don’t have access to anything that would normally be duplicated by a member of the SU. So, because they are two classes around the thing, they aren’t eligible for the upass but, they also aren’t available for the transit passes that other University employees are. I got an email about this last summer.

GHOSSEIN: I’m all for it but it all comes down to the contract that we have with the City of Edmonton. As far as I know, there is no such stipulation in the contract that we have right now so we might have to ask the University to do something about it.

BROPHY: Yeah, the policy is to do with transit so I don’t think everything in the policy has to aimed at actors. I am talking about an idea aimed at the University to says this needs to change and would could fit under the policy unless that is another policy concerning student transit where it might fit better under.

GHOSSEIN: So, just to clarify for my own safety because I’m going to be going to upass meetings so we are directing that towards the university, correct?
BROPHY: Correct.

GHOSSEIN: So, in my mind, those students wouldn’t receive a upass but receive the transit passes other employees receive.

BROPHY: Yeah, I’m saying the university should give those student employees the same benefit other employees receive.

MONDA: Can we do that?

BROPHY: Yeah, it's about asking the university for these things.

GHOSSEIN: We do get request for example, extending gym memberships when a students‘ academic year ends in May. We just need to advocate.

DEJONG: That’s definitely a gap that the SU should be trying to fill. Does anybody have anything else they’d like to add?

MONDA: I think we need to put more about safety in the this policy because a lot of students feel unsafe using public transit in the Edmonton area. Currently, it kinda addresses that in the first principle/facts we should have more about that students feel unsafe on transit. We also have a lot of data to back that up since the Edmonton Students’ Association did a survey, and it’s something that our advocacy efforts can be better on.

DEJONG: Yeah, I think we’re all in agreement about that. So, students summer casual employees and safety on transit are two gaps we’ve identified. Let’s go through it point by point and see if what we want to be changed. Looking at the policy, it looks good to me but I wanted to open that out to everyone so let me know. This is kinda too much for us to hash out today.

SANDARE: For changes we can make, when we look at this again. The upass have been expanded to regional municipalities. So for resolution point 4, I think we can just use that as all upass users as a whole.

BROPHY: I not sure what that change would be as that seems to be the point anyway.

SANDARE: Yeah, definitely not a huge change but just pointing out the fact that we are under one system now as opposed to before.

BROPHY: The thing is yes, we’re all under the upass but each figures out their own routes and such independently. It’s not like we’re just dealing with one system. They’re still independent groups.
GHOSSEIN: In my mind, it also has to be expanded to leduc and others. If you live on a farm, DEJONG: If there aren’t any more comment, so if I heard right we have these three items to add. Is there anyone who is interested in doing a review of the policy for the next committee meeting?

GHOSSEIN: I can do that. I can put it in a google doc so that other can see the changes and also add in stuff.

DEJONG: Great, so that will be for the next meeting.

2016-09/3c Tuition Policy Review

HOWIE: So tuition is very challenging since after talking about it constituents, people have a lot of opinions on it but it has to be renewed. I’m trying to figure out if we go for something really strong or if we kinda renew most/all of what’s there and leave it until next time. I’m not sure what to do since some want to redo the whole the policy and specify $0 tuition with a roadmap to nothing. And then, there are others who want to consider the other side and where I personally stand is not important because when you’re looking at the review, it needs to work for everyone. So, I’m very open to anyone’s thoughts on how to do this.

BROPHY: So, I found an argument that refutes what I was saying last time we were talking about this. In jurisdictions, where they do have $0 tuition, it reduces the number of spots which then creates a huge access issue because when you reduce spots, it all becomes more competitive. Then, students from wealthier backgrounds who can afford something like a tutor to get better grades and get into university. So, I’m definitely on board with saying $0 tuition is probably not the best idea but defiantly controls on tuition. Resolution #3, I think needs the most work because there are times when a tuition increase will be better than cutting service i.e. market modifier fiasco.

HOWIE: Exactly, I added to resolution #3 discussing that. So, I added “except for when students are benefited directly.”

SANDARE: On the point of resolution #3, as the Students’ Union, we need to be looking at this as a holistic perspective. We did implement things in Bylaw about ways to go against political policy. I think that we should continue to say that we will work towards reduction. I disagree with $0 tuition in there for reasons of accessibility and I echo Councillor Brophy’s point earlier that is we have $0 tuition then we would have fewer spaces. We are creating a system much less equitable and excluding from the system groups that are marginalized and already having difficulty accessing the system anyways. So, I think that’s one of the biggest groups we should be thinking of. I support saying that we’ll work toward reduction, knowing that if there is a reason that one of the faculties believes that it will be better for them to have an increase in tuition than they are able to run a referendum and go through the approved structures.

HOWIE: So, in your opinion, we don’t change the policy and leave it as in?

SANDARE: Yes, because there is also the future ready consultation that is happening right now. So, my assumption is that in the next two years the Government of Alberta will be making changes to tuition models. That is something we should be looking for rather than making changes. We should leave it as in now with us working towards reduction then depending on what happens with the future ready program, then we can make changes.

HOWIE: I would be in favor with renewing it just as is since looking it over there isn’t anything in the facts that is a blank hole. Everything seems to stand up to what I’ve learnt about it.

NDATIRWA: I think in terms of point #3, I would feel a bit awkward leaving it as we wouldn’t support increase in tuition. If students support the increase and we also agree with it, us putting that we would not support the increase is a bit weird.

SANDARE: We could make a point that we will not support increasing tuition and work towards reduction with a point underneath it saying unless a faculty association were to reun the mechanism.

MONDA: It already says that in bylaw so I don’t think it’s necessary to put that in the policy unless we want to change the whole resolution of point 3.

BROPHY: Just because we have the mechanism for the faculty associations to deviate from the policy doesn’t mean we should have keeping the SU bound by this resolution as written because ideally, it would be nice for the SU to back up any FA’s that want to make that move, also if the SU might support a tuition increase. It offers the SU more flexibility as an organization if the policy written here is more flexible. Having a true united front would be ideal.

GHOSSEIN: It’s not that I’m tied to the policy as now, it’s just as the SU we have to hold a bird’s eye view. And I think, we would be hesitate to supporting any kind of tuition increase, at least publicly and to the Government even if a FA supports it. We’re facing different opinions on $0 or less and us coming at that by saying we might ask for more is not what we want.

BROPHY: Right now, we have it as we’ll work towards a reduction of tuition increase. There’s a difference between saying we’ll advocate against higher tuition and binding us to saying we’ll actively fight against it. I’d like some flexibility and binding us to saying we’ll actively fight against it is a bit of a problem.

LARSEN: I’m of the opinion of VP Ghossein. Also, the way that this is worded ensures that we work towards reductions and also get maximum value for any increase. We’ll work towards reduction of any increase doesn’t mean we’ll oppose any increase but that we’ll work towards reductions so that we get the value on that increase. As far as changing it, I would only see a change if it said $0 tuition.

BANISTER: I am fine with it just as it is. I brought this up to faculty associations at COFA and they all thought we should leave it just as it is.

Councillors agree to renew it as is.

DEJONG: How does everyone feel about bringing the first principles to Council?

HOWIE/SANDARE move to bring the Tuition Policy to council.
